

Come learn about the financial benefits of protecting your land!

Depending on your needs and financial situation, you have many preservation options available to you. These options include selling at fair market value, donating a part or all of your land, and protecting its natural values while keeping ownership in the family. Perhaps a combination of techniques could be right for you.

This workshop will discuss the financial benefits that can be achieved, focusing on land preservation and financial planning. Taxes are a significant influence on family decisions because capital gains, estate, and income taxes can be significant. This free workshop considers benefits to your pocketbook when preserving land. It will also talk about important legislation that offers tremendous new land conservation tax benefits in 2006 and 2007.
